Example 2 of bad timeliness:	This is a late entry of a Promotion for a Reserve member. Once the job row was built, the member finally received their back pay in end month August pay cycle 2018 (a year after the effective date). This also has a large effect on taxes for the previous year for this member.  The screenshot shows a job data entry form for Freddy Krueger. The form is divided into several sections: Work Location, Job Information, Job Labor, Payroll, Salary Plan, and Compensation. The main section is Work Location Details, which includes fields for Effective Date (08/09/2017), Effective Sequence (0), HR Status (Active), Payroll Status (Active), Position Number (00072118), Position Entry Date (07/31/2015), Regulatory Region (RSV), Company (ACG), Business Unit (ENLCG), Department (038673), Department Entry Date (04/17/2017), Location (CA0420), and Establishment ID (USCG). The form also includes a Military section with Reserve Class Code (Q) and Component Category. The Date Created field is highlighted in red and shows 05/08/2018. The form includes navigation buttons like Save, Return to Search, Notify, Refresh, Update/Display, Include History, and Correct History.
