

ACTIVE DUTY

Military Spouses:

What You Should Know About the New Blended Retirement System (BRS)

How does the BRS affect my military member?

If your active-duty spouse is serving as of Dec. 31, 2017, he or she is grandfathered under the legacy retirement system. Those with fewer than 12 years of total service as of Dec. 31, 2017, will have the choice of opting into the BRS.

What is the military spouse's role?

- ✓ Discuss the decision with your Service member as it is final and cannot be reversed.
- ✓ Take advantage of free, personal support from your installation's accredited Personal Financial Manager or Counselor at <http://www.militaryinstallations.dod.mil>.
- ✓ Learn more about retirement choices by viewing the online BRS Opt-In Course together at <http://jko.jten.mil/courses/brs/OPT-IN/launch.html>.
- ✓ Calculate, compare and contrast your Service member's retirement benefits under both systems using the BRS Comparison Calculator at <http://militarypay.defense.gov/Calculators/BRS>.

What's the timeline for making the decision?

- ➔ Your eligible spouse can opt into the BRS anytime during calendar year 2018.
- ➔ Review the options carefully.

What if my military member has a break in service and rejoins after the opt-in window?

Service members who rejoin active duty and still have less than 12 years of service will have 30 days to choose the BRS or remain in the legacy system.
